

Segra Expands Market Reach with Strategic Acquisition of Everstream's All-Fiber Network in St. Louis Metro

CHARLOTTE, N.C. and CLEVELAND, OH — October 1, 2024 — Segra, a leading provider of high-capacity, fiber-based communication networks, and Everstream, a business-only fiber network, today announced that Segra has acquired Everstream's all-fiber network in the St. Louis metropolitan area.

This strategic move advances Segra's ongoing efforts to improve service options to its customers by adding nearly 1,000 route miles to its national network. The new footprint will be connected to Segra's Southeast and Midwest networks, bringing greater capacity, state-of-the-art fiber connectivity, and customer focused technology solutions to a broader market.

"This acquisition represents a key milestone in Segra's strategy to bring competitive options to more customers," said Kevin Anderson, CEO of Segra. "By acquiring Everstream's St. Louis assets, Segra broadens the reach of our best-in-class fiber network into a new market, and also reaffirms our commitment to delivering a white-glove customer service experience, greater network capacity, and innovative technology solutions to our customers. We are thrilled to welcome Everstream's St. Louis-based employees and customers to the Segra family."

Segra is committed to ensuring a smooth transition for customers, who will immediately gain access to its national service footprint and customer service offerings. Segra's network features the latest advances in IP, Ethernet and dark fiber architectures, as well as a suite of other services.

Ken Fitzpatrick, CEO of Everstream, said, "We are confident Segra is the right owner for the St. Louis network and will seamlessly provide the reliable service our St. Louis metro customers have come to expect."

This market acquisition follows Segra's recent integration with Unite Private Networks (UPN). Segra was acquired by Cox Communications in 2021 and merged with UPN in July 2023. The combined strengths of both Segra and UPN are already paving the way for enhanced service offerings across the U.S.

"Cox is committed to serving our business customers with comprehensive technology solutions, from fiber networks connecting their locations to managed IT and cloud solutions," said Mark Greatrex, president, Cox Communications. "By acquiring more fiber miles in new markets, we extend our ability to power customers' innovative operations and fuel their future growth."

Financial terms of the transaction were not disclosed.
